Interested in making the graduate–practitioner jump?

One of the main reasons Kaplan’s courses appeal to our students is the fact they are industry developed and delivered. Learning from professionals across the breadth of the finance industry who walk the talk on a daily basis provides a real value-add learning opportunity. Hopefully, as an alumni, you’re much the wiser for it.

With a practically applied qualification and more on the job experience of your own, we’d like to pose the question: are you now the expert, and one who’s willing to impart your knowledge to those in whose shoes you once stood?

Becoming a Kaplan practitioner will not only benefit our students, it will benefit you too. It’s an excellent means of professional development, as tasks like lecturing help refine presenting and communication skills that can be applied to other aspects of your professional life. What’s more, doors are opened to an exclusive network of senior industry professionals, which offers the potential for both business development and career opportunities.

We’re currently looking for people to make lecture recordings of various topics in the following subjects:

- FIN215 Asset and Liability Management
- FIN221 Structuring and Packaging Financial Products
- FIN227 Mining Investment Analysis
- FIN236 Quantitative Applications in Finance
- FIN238 Project Finance

To be considered, you’ll need to satisfy certain criteria. Most importantly, you must currently be working with the subject matter.

If you’d like to apply for any of these positions or you’d like more information about becoming a practitioner, please email a copy of your current CV to practitioners@kaplan.edu.au and specify which of the opportunities you’d like to be considered for.

Kind regards,

The Practitioner-Faculty team.
